

THE CHURCH OF ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST

71 Murray Avenue, Goshen, New York 10924

www.sjegoshen.org ~ (845) 294-5328 ~ office@sjegoshen.org

Everyone is invited to a special Vocations Dinner on Saturday, November 19 from 5:00 to 7:00pm in the Dominican Center at Mount Saint Mary College in Newburgh. This special evening is sponsoring by Hudson Valley Catholic Young Adults, the archdiocesan Office of Vocations, and the Orange County Deanery. The speakers will include priests, religious sisters, friars, deacons, married couples, and single people. The dinner is free, but reservations are requested, so that there will be food enough for everyone. RSVP to Luigi.Manente@archny.org. All are invited, too, to stay for Catholic Underground North.

Some time ago, I wrote that I hoped to hire someone to take on a share of the administrative and financial tasks that have become part and parcel of pastoring today. I am very pleased to share the news that Jim Cully, a long-time parishioner of St. John's, has accepted the position, which for now we're going to call "business manager." Jim's responsibilities will include overseeing our financial record-keeping; reviewing and approving invoices to be paid; working with our bookkeeping service; serving as the parish liaison with contractors and vendors; keeping track of the maintenance of our buildings and equipment; and supervising our Safe Environment program and its associated records. Since this is new territory, we'll no doubt tweak the duties over time. In any event, I am very happy to have Jim on board.

Recently, I had occasion to reread portions of Gaudium et Spes, the “pastoral constitution” of the Second Vatican Council. In light of this week’s national and local elections, I’d like to share this selection.

Faithfully your priest,
Fr. George Hafemann

76. It is very important, especially where a pluralistic society prevails, that there be a correct notion of the relationship between the political community and the Church, and a clear distinction between the tasks which Christians undertake, individually or as a group, on their own responsibility as citizens guided by the dictates of a Christian conscience, and the activities which, in union with their pastors, they carry out in the name of the Church.

The Church, by reason of her role and competence, is not identified in any way with the political community nor bound to any political system. She is at once a sign and a safeguard of the transcendent character of the human person.

The Church and the political community in their own fields are autonomous and independent from each other. Yet both, under different titles, are devoted to the personal and social vocation of the same men. The more that both foster sounder cooperation between themselves with due consideration for the circumstances of time and place, the more effective will their service be exercised for the good of all. For man's horizons are not limited only to the temporal order; while living in the context of human history, he preserves intact his eternal vocation. The Church, for her part, founded on the love of the Redeemer, contributes toward the reign of justice and charity within the borders of a nation and between nations. By preaching the truths of the Gospel, and bringing to bear on all fields of human endeavor the light of her doctrine and of a Christian witness, she respects and fosters the political freedom and responsibility of citizens.

The Apostles, their successors and those who cooperate with them, are sent to announce to mankind Christ, the Savior. Their apostolate is based on the power of God, Who very often shows forth the strength of the Gospel on the weakness of its witnesses. All those dedicated to the ministry of God's Word must use the ways and means proper to the Gospel, which in a great many respects differ from the means proper to the earthly city.

There are, indeed, close links between earthly things and those elements of man's condition which transcend the world. The Church herself makes use of temporal things insofar as her own mission requires it. She, for her part, does not place her trust in the privileges offered by civil authority. She will even give up the exercise of certain rights which have been legitimately acquired, if it becomes clear that their use will cast doubt on the sincerity of her witness or that new ways of life demand new methods. It is only right, however, that at all times and in all places, the Church should have true freedom to preach the faith, to teach her social doctrine, to exercise her role freely among men, and also to pass moral judgment in those matters which regard public order when the fundamental rights of a person or the salvation of souls require it. In this, she should make use of all the means—but only those—which accord with the Gospel and which correspond to the general good according to the diversity of times and circumstances.

While faithfully adhering to the Gospel and fulfilling her mission to the world, the Church, whose duty it is to foster and elevate all that is found to be true, good and beautiful in the human community, strengthens peace among men for the glory of God.

A Lament on the Declining Quality of Public Discourse

John A. Cuddeback

Our approach to public discourse, as well as to our private discourse, should give evidence of the importance of going back to first truths: truths not yet sufficiently understood, and so constantly revisited. Rather than veiling basic convictions, we can seek to express them better, while also seeking a deeper understanding of them.

Our experience in the public square, as well as in serious friendships, and certainly marriage, makes abundantly clear just how much is required to come to a meeting of minds, and so a meeting of persons. Dominant cultural habits today are working against us: we downplay truth, and the power of reason to answer the most basic questions of life, and we neglect the greatest minds of our civilization, and the arts and sciences they discovered.

And perhaps even worse, we do not put a premium on forming the moral dispositions and on protecting the physical contexts for personal presence, both of which are necessary for having real conversations, and for living in relationship with others. Truth is about relationships; and relationships are about truth.

Changing the nature of public discourse might seem a bridge too far. But it is at least in our power to form habits and contexts for conversation, not quarrels.
